International Foundation for Electoral Systems

5. At its 28th meeting, on 23 May 2011, the Committee considered the application of the non-governmental organization International Foundation for Electoral Systems.

6. The representative of Cuba sought an explanation about the organization's involvement in drafting a manual about democratic transition in Cuba and the electoral system in the country and posed several questions regarding motivations to make a manual on Cuba without the request of the country.

7. The representative of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela posed further questions regarding the work of the non-governmental organization in her country and requested certificates of registration in Guatemala, Haiti and Nicaragua to clarify the organization's status in those countries.

8. The representative of Peru stated that the application of the non-governmental organization had been deferred for two years despite the fact that it met the requirements under resolution 1996/31. He added that after that long period of time the non-governmental organization deserved a response from the Committee, underlining that the lack of a decision affected the efficiency of the work of the Committee. Based on those technical criteria, he then proposed a motion under rule 51 to close further debate and to grant consultative status to the non-governmental organization.

9. The representative of Cuba opposed the motion on the grounds that responses from the non-governmental organization to questions posed by the Committee were still awaited. She also stated that International Foundation for Electoral Systems had issued inappropriate reports that called for a change of government in Cuba, that this was an illustrative example of interference in the internal affairs of a Member State and was detrimental to its sovereignty and that the non-governmental organization had thus acted contrary to Council resolution 1996/31. She also said that International Foundation for Electoral Systems was one of the organizations listed by USAID as a participant in a programme against Cuba that sponsored subversive plans against the country. She then called for a no-action motion on the proposal by Peru to keep reviewing the case until the Committee was fully satisfied with the answers.

10. In accordance with the rules of procedure, delegates from two Member States, namely China and the Russian Federation, spoke in support of the no-action motion proposed by Cuba. They stated that they believed in the right of all members as responsible States to ask questions and withhold action until the Committee was fully satisfied with the responses. They added that that was not only the right but the responsibility of the Committee. They also underlined that it was impossible to take an informed decision without having had a thorough dialogue with the non-governmental organizations that had submitted applications for consultative status.

11. The representatives of Bulgaria and the United States of America spoke against the no-action motion. The representative of Bulgaria stated that International Foundation for Electoral Systems had already undergone several rounds of questions, provided satisfactory answers to explain its work and clearly fulfilled the eligibility requirements under resolution 1996/31. The representative of the United States deplored the fact that procedural tactics were used to keep deferring the application instead of allowing members to vote on whether the non-governmental organization met the criteria set out in resolution 1996/31. She further stated that the non-governmental organization had answered repeatedly that it did not operate in countries without the invitation of the host Government and that recent projects had included increasing accessibility to polling stations for those with disabilities.

12. The no-action motion was carried by a roll-call vote of 8 in favour, 6 against, with 4 abstentions. Eighteen of the 19 members of the Committee were present and voting.

In favour:

Burundi, China, Cuba, Nicaragua, Pakistan, Russian Federation, Sudan, Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of)

Against:

Belgium, Bulgaria, Israel, Peru, Turkey, United States of America

Abstaining:

India, Kyrgyzstan, Morocco, Senegal

Absent:

Mozambique

13. The representative of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, in her statement after the vote, stated that the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela had serious and profound questions about the organization and needed clarification with regard to the investigations and complaints that had taken place regarding the actions of the organization in countries in the region, including in the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela. The representative stated that for her delegation it was worrisome that a decision about the organization was being forced when the organization had been accused of acting covertly to serve its reprehensible and unacceptable interventionist goals while meddling in the internal affairs of its country, following the orders of its main financier. Those actions infringed upon the spirit and letter of the Charter of the United Nations.

14. The representative of Turkey explained that his delegation had voted against the no-action motion because it believed that the Committee should take action on all applications that had been deferred for more than four sessions and, sharing the concern of some delegations that the Committee should not choose arbitrarily which applications to act upon, also believed that the Committee should adopt objective criteria in order to prevent endless discussions and further polarization of the Committee.

15. The representative of Pakistan stressed that voting in favour of the no-action motion was not a judgement on the substance of the non-governmental organization or its activities, but rather an affirmation of the principled position that each Committee member had a right to ask questions of any non-governmental organization in order to get satisfactory responses.

16. The representative of the United States of America once again expressed her concern that certain members of the Committee were using procedural tactics to obfuscate issues instead of evaluating non-governmental organizations on substance and using resolution 1996/31 as a guiding principle. She further stated that it was unacceptable to have the door of the United Nations closed to such a reputable non-governmental organization.

17. The representative of Peru expressed the hope that the Committee would recommend consultative status for the non-governmental organization as soon as it had received answers to the new questions posed to it today. He added that his delegation supported the proposal by the delegation of Turkey on the need to take action on applications that had been deferred for more than four sessions. Likewise, the representative of Israel expressed support for the work of the non-governmental organization and said her delegation would also be willing to recommend consultative status. She also supported Turkey's intervention regarding the necessity to take action on all applications that had been deferred for more than four sessions.

18. The representative of the Russian Federation stated that the Russian Federation looked forward to continuing the dialogue with the non-governmental organization, with a view to adopting a final decision in due course.

19. The representative of India stated that the non-governmental organization should be given an appropriate opportunity to respond to the questions raised by the Committee.

20. Following the outcome of the vote, further consideration of the non-governmental organization was deferred to the next session of the Committee.

International Lesbian and Gay Association

21. At its 29th meeting, on 23 May 2011, the Committee considered the application of the non-governmental organization International Lesbian and Gay Association.

22. The representative of Burundi stated that the non-governmental organization still avoided answering directly on the questionnaire that had been submitted to it with the agreement and the approval of all the members of the Committee, since some of the non-governmental organization members had been accused of acts of paedophilia, which in 2002 had led the Committee to close consideration of its application by consensus. The refusal of the non-governmental organization to collaborate with the Committee was by now notorious. She added that the questionnaire was not discriminatory — as the non-governmental organization was describing it — since it had been addressed to the organization not in the context of the organization's objectives but only because of the facts for which it had been reproached. She requested that the non-governmental organization respond by submitting the questionnaire.

23. The representative of Belgium stated that the case of the International Lesbian and Gay Association was well known to the Committee. The non-governmental organization was making its third request for consultative status; it had done so in 1999, 2005 and 2009 and since the issue of the questionnaire was familiar to all, the non-governmental organization deserved a response from the Committee. He reiterated that the non-governmental organization had been harassed and discriminated against and that it was time for the Committee to move directly to a vote under rule 51.

24. The representative of Senegal stated that at the current point, since the non-governmental organization was challenging the Committee by refusing categorically to respond to the questionnaire sent unanimously by the Committee, it would not be possible to grant consultative status. He added that the practice in the Committee was to defer consideration of the application of any non-governmental organization that had not responded to the questions posed by the delegations. He thus stated that his delegation, along with those of Burundi, Morocco and the Sudan, called for a no-action motion in response to the request by Belgium to take action on the non-governmental organization. He concluded by saying that those delegations would objectively take action on the non-governmental organization once it responded to the questionnaire.

25. With regard to the rules of procedure, the representatives of the Sudan and the Russian Federation spoke in favour of the no-action motion. The representative of the Sudan stated that it was standard procedure for non-governmental organizations to respond to the queries of the Committee and that the non-governmental organization should have responded to the aforementioned questionnaire by now. The representative of the Russian Federation stated that his delegation was also in favour of the proposal since the non-governmental organization had not responded to the questions posed, in keeping with the mandate of the Committee, and that it was important for the Committee to conclude the dialogue with a non-governmental organization before taking a responsible and informed decision on an application.

26. The representatives of Israel and Bulgaria spoke against the no-action motion. The representative of Israel stated that the organization was not new to the Committee, having received consultative status in 1993 and then having been suspended in 1994, after which time it had applied three times for consultative status. The representative of Bulgaria stated that the application had been pending for more than 10 years and that the non-governmental organization had already answered numerous questions posed to it by the Committee. She expressed her concern that a discriminatory approach had been systematically used towards the non-governmental organization in order to prevent the Committee from taking a decision on the substance, and that for that particular reason the decision had been delayed for a number of years.

27. The result of the no-action motion under rule 50 of the Council led to a tie, based on a roll-call vote of 7 in favour, 7 against and 4 abstaining. Eighteen of the 19 members of the Committee were present and voting. The Chair explained that under rule 71 when the vote is equally divided, the proposal for a motion is considered rejected. The voting was as follows:

In favour:

Burundi, China, Morocco, Pakistan, Russian Federation, Senegal, Sudan

Against:

Belgium, Bulgaria, India, Israel, Peru, Turkey, United States of America

Abstaining:

Kyrgyzstan, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of)

Absent:

Cuba

28. Following the vote, the Chair proceeded with the vote to grant consultative status to the organization, as proposed by the representative of Belgium, under rule 59 of the Council. The representative of Senegal then asked for a roll-call vote on whether to grant consultative status to the non-governmental organization.

29. The roll-call vote for granting status followed, resulting in 8 votes against, 7 in favour and 3 abstentions. Eighteen of the 19 members of the Committee were present and voting. The proposal to recommend granting consultative status to the non-governmental organization, International Lesbian and Gay Association, was thereby rejected.

In favour:

Belgium, Bulgaria, India, Israel, Peru, Turkey, United States of America

Against:

Burundi, China, Kyrgyzstan, Morocco, Pakistan, Russian Federation, Senegal, Sudan

Abstaining:

Mozambique, Nicaragua, Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of)

Absent:

Cuba

30. The voting was followed by statements from Member States. The representative of the United States of America explained that the reason her delegation had voted to grant status to the non-governmental organization was because the non-governmental organization had sought to prevent discrimination towards an organization based on sexual orientation and gender identity, which was in accordance with the criteria in resolution 1996/31. She stated her disappointment that the Committee was judging non-governmental organizations based on discriminatory grounds and stated that the United States would call on the Council yet again to do justice to the non-governmental organization as it had done in the past for other lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender non-governmental organizations.

31. Along similar lines, the representative of Bulgaria stated that her delegation was disappointed with the outcome of the vote because it amounted to a discriminatory approach that had prevented the Committee throughout its history from recommending even a single lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender organization for status.

32. The representative of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, in her statement after the vote, indicated that based on article 21 of the country's National Constitution (1999) and the legal interpretation of its Supreme Court, discrimination motivated by race, sex, religion, social condition or any kind of discrimination, including sexual orientation, was prohibited. The National Legislative Assembly was currently discussing a new organic law for gender equity and equality in order to specifically develop legislation regarding the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender persons and, in that regard, encouraged the activism of non-governmental organizations and social movements that defended the rights of the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender community. The delegation of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela had stated that it was ready to grant consultative status to the International Lesbian and Gay Association. However, it had abstained in both the motions for no-action and the vote on the application of the non-governmental organization because, according to the rules of procedures and the practice of the Committee, consultative status should not be granted to any organization while questions and enquiries were still pending from any member of the Committee. They regretted that the consideration of the application of the International Lesbian and Gay Association had been closed because of the decision of some Member States to force a decision by threatening a vote.

33. The representative of Israel expressed her disappointment with the fact that the organization had been rejected because it dealt with issues of sexual orientation and gender identity. While those were sensitive issues, the organization fully met the criteria contained in resolution 1996/31.

34. The representative of Belgium expressed a feeling of disappointment and shame that some delegations had hidden behind procedural tactics, instead of voting on substance. He acknowledged that there were differences of opinion on lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender issues among Member States but that the non-governmental organization had complied with the criteria outlined in resolution 1996/31. He also said that while members of the Committee had the right to ask questions, it was also their responsibility to take a decision within a reasonable time frame.

35. The representative of Burundi said that it was regrettable that some members of the Committee, whose countries had been members of the Committee at various times when decisions on submitting the questionnaire to the non-governmental organization and on its suspension had been taken by consensus, had started to insist on the discriminatory character of the questionnaire.

36. The representative of the Sudan, in support of the representative of Burundi, stated that since questions posed to the non-governmental organization by the Committee were still pending, the non-governmental organization was obliged to respond to them.

37. The representative of Nicaragua stated that according to the constitution of her country, all individuals were equal before the law and had the same right to protection without any discrimination. Nicaragua was one of the few countries in the world that had a special office to promote and defend sexual diversity rights. Notwithstanding the above, her delegation abstained because of procedural considerations and out of respect for the right of Member States to ask appropriate questions and receive satisfactory responses from non-governmental organizations.

38. As a result of the vote, the Committee decided to recommend not to grant consultative status to the non-governmental organization.

Syrian Center for Media and Freedom of Expression

39. At its 30th meeting, on 24 May 2011, the Committee considered the application of the non-governmental organization Syrian Center for Media and Freedom of Expression.

40. The representatives of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela and China requested the non-governmental organization to provide documentation to prove that it was authorized to operate in the Syrian Arab Republic, and to submit answers to all outstanding questions.

41. The representative of the Sudan said that consideration of the non-governmental organization had raised concern among some of the members of the Committee since the Center was based in Paris but monitored sensitive issues, such as freedom of expression in the Syrian Arab Republic, without legal status in that country.

42. The representative of India noted that the non-governmental organization had not responded completely to a previous question posed to the organization.

43. The representative of the United States of America said that the non-governmental organization worked on human rights issues and freedom of expression and clearly fulfilled the requirements under resolution 1996/31. She maintained that the organization had already been deferred for more than two years, despite providing considerable documentation of its work and responding to more than 40 questions from the Committee, many of which were repetitive. She then called for immediate action to vote on the application of the non-governmental organization. She said it was clear that some delegations, including an observer delegation, were seeking to silence the non-governmental organization because they did not agree with the views of free speech put forward by the organization.

44. The representative of the Sudan then called for an adjournment of the debate on the non-governmental organization under rule 50 of the Council, citing the need to seek further clarification on the application and advising against taking hasty decisions that could potentially lead to its closure.

45. Pursuant to the rules of procedure, the representatives of Cuba and Nicaragua spoke in support of the motion by the Sudan to adjourn the debate. The representative of Cuba stated that there were still numerous doubts and misgivings among Committee members about the organization that had not been fully allayed. The representative of Nicaragua stated that the Committee could not grant consultative status to a non-governmental organization since some Member States still had doubts about the eligibility of the organization.

46. The representatives of Belgium and Bulgaria spoke against the motion. The representative of Belgium lauded the non-governmental organization for its good work and said that all its documents were in order. Under the circumstances, and after five rounds of questions and answers, the Committee had had sufficient time to make its decision. The representative of Bulgaria also underlined the fact that the non-governmental organization had provided clear-cut and thorough answers to numerous questions posed to it by the Committee, including an explanation about why it was not registered in the Syrian Arab Republic.

47. The no-action motion was passed by a roll-call vote of 10 to 6, with 3 abstentions.

In favour:

Burundi, China, Cuba, India, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Pakistan, Russian Federation, Sudan, Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of)

Against:

Belgium, Bulgaria, Israel, Peru, Turkey, United States of America

Abstaining:

Kyrgyzstan, Morocco, Senegal

48. In making a general statement, the representative of Turkey explained that his delegation had voted against the no-action motion because it believed that the Committee should take action on all applications that had been deferred for more than four sessions and, sharing the concern of some delegations that the Committee should not choose arbitrarily which applications to act upon, that the Committee should adopt an objective criteria in order to prevent endless discussions and further polarization of the Committee.

49. In his statement after the vote, the representative of the Sudan stressed that any non-governmental organization working in the Syrian Arab Republic must be respectful of Syrian national integrity. The representative of Burundi emphasized that each delegation had the right to ask questions and receive satisfactory answers.

50. The representative of the United States of America said that her delegation was deeply disappointed by the outcome of the vote and regretted that some members had once again resorted to procedural tactics in order to avoid making decisions. She emphasized that her delegation would continue working to ensure that the voices of civil society were not silenced.

51. In her statement after the vote, the representative of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela stated that her delegation had questions that needed to be answered by the organization. Her delegation reiterated that members of the Committee had the full right to ask any questions necessary of applicant organizations. The delegation of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela noted that taking decisions via force on certain non-governmental organizations — by applying a selective criteria — while there were hundreds of other non-governmental organizations still under consideration was against the practices and procedures established by the Committee.

52. The observer of France stated that the non-governmental organization had been founded in accordance with proper procedures in France and that its activities were in accordance with resolution 1996/31. Since its application had been deferred for two years, his country would request the Council to grant consultative status to the non-governmental organization in July 2011.

53. The observer of the Syrian Arab Republic stated that the sovereignty of her country must be upheld as a legitimate right of all Member States. She said that her country would not accept any interference by other States. She also mentioned that it was a legitimate question to ask why the non-governmental organization was registered in Paris but active in the Syrian Arab Republic.

54. Following the outcome of the vote, further consideration of the non-governmental organization was deferred to the next session of the Committee.

Applications closed without prejudice

55. At its 31st meeting, on 24 May 2011, the Committee decided to close without prejudice consideration of the applications of 32 non-governmental organizations that had not responded to the Committee's questions despite three reminders sent to the organizations (see chap. I, draft decision II).

B. New applications for consultative status and new requests for reclassification

56. The Committee considered item 3 (b) of its agenda, New applications for consultative status and new requests for reclassification at its 18th to 25th meetings, from 16 to 18 May, and at its 28th through 31st meetings, on 23 and 24 May. The Committee considered a total of 117 new applications for consultative status.

Requests for reclassification

59. At its 29th meeting, on 23 May 2011, the Committee considered six requests for reclassification of consultative status, which included one new request for reclassification, contained in document E/C.2/2011/R.3/Add.1, and five deferred requests for reclassification, contained in document E/C.2/2011/CRP.8. It decided to recommend reclassification of status for three organizations, including one from the Roster to special consultative status and two from special to general consultative status (see chap. I, draft decision I, subpara. (d)).

60. At the same meeting, the Committee decided to defer its consideration of the application for reclassification of status of the following three organizations:

International Diabetes Federation

International Federation of Consular Corps and Associations

Family Health International

III. Quadrennial reports submitted by non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Council

A. Quadrennial reports submitted by non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Council that had been deferred at the resumed session

61. At its 26th meeting, on 20 May 2011, the Committee had before it a memorandum by the Secretary-General containing a compilation of quadrennial reports submitted by non-governmental organizations in general and special consultative status with the Council on their activities during the period from 1999 to 2010, which had been deferred from previous sessions of the Committee (see E/C.2/2011/CRP.7). Of the 19 reports, the Committee took note of 1 of at the current session. The Committee also decided to defer consideration of two of the reports contained in the list of new quadrennial reports (E/C.2/2011/2/Add.17-32). Accordingly, the Committee decided to defer consideration of the following 20 quadrennial reports from 15 organizations:

Becket Fund for Religious Liberty (2006-2009)

Centrist Democratic International (1994-1997), (1998-2001), (2002-2005), (2006-2009)^{4,5}
